- Chinese government rejects Coca-Cola's bid for juice maker Huiyuan, citing the takeover would unduly restrict competition
- The World Bank lowered its forecast for China's GDP growth in 2009 to 6.5% from the 7.5% rate it had predicted last November, citing a huge drop in exports and slowing private sector investment (See That Was The Week That Was - Wednesday, March 4 /09)
- The Bank of Japan plans to increase its purchases of Japanese Government bonds by more than 30%
- The U.K. Financial Services Authority (FSA) urges British banks to bolster capital reserves and declares a willingness to regulate U.K. subsidiaries of foreign banks more aggressively
- The International Monetary Fund says Britain's economic recession could be deeper and longer than most other countries
- IBM reportedly in talks to buy SunMicrosystems for $7 billion (U.S.) in cash
- David Friehling, Bernard Madoff's accountant is charged with securities fraud, aiding investment advisor fraud and making false filings to the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC).
Mr. Friehling, 49 years old, faces a maximum of 105 years in prison if convicted on all counts; which upon his eventual release date in 2114 should qualify him as the world's oldest man.
- The Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) stated that since its January meeting, the American economy had contracted further, suffering additional "job losses, declining equity and housing wealth and tight credit conditions have weighed on consumer sentiment and spending." Accordingly, it announced that the Fed will purchase $300 billion (U.S.) of long-term Treasury bonds over the next 6 months.

Thursday, March 19th.

- FedEx Corp. announces a second plan to cut $1 billion (U.S.) in costs, including job and salary cuts during 2009 and 2010, as the company posted a 75% drop in profits to $97 million (U.S.) in its 3rd. fiscal quarter versus a profit of $393 million (U.S.) in the same period a year ago
